

“A Saving Dress Reform”

©2017 OSWEGO COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY 135 EAST THIRD STREET OSWEGO, NY 13126

A Saving Dress Reform.

A new effort at woman's dress reform is being made by the managers of cotton mills at Saco, Me. Because of the accidents that have occurred through the hair or dress of operatives being caught in the machinery it has been ordered that girls shall not wear their hair hanging down, but must coil it close to the head, and the waist and sleeves of their dresses must be close fitting, the latter, of course, being opposed to anything and everything at present stylish.

The Daily Leader, January 04, 1895, page 2.

A Saving Dress Reform

A new effort at woman's dress reform is being made by the managers of cotton mills at Saco, Me. Because of the accidents that have occurred through the hair or dress of operatives being caught in the machinery it has been ordered that girls shall not wear their hair hanging down, but must coil it close to the head, and the waist and sleeves of their dresses must be close fitting, the latter, of course, being opposed to anything and everything at present stylish.

Questions:

1. What does the inside of an 1800's cotton mill look like? What does the machinery do in a cotton mill?
2. What did women's clothing look like in the 1890's?
3. What is driving the decision for "girls" to change the type of clothing work while working?
4. What types of safety clothing is used today in dangerous work?